Scott was a true "people person" and this helped him during his career as a Salesman. He continued trying to better himself throughout his life, returning to college to finish his degree at the age of 43. He never met a stranger, and once you met Scott, you had a lifelong friend. Always generous, he would give his last dollar to help anyone in need. But, if you needed help with anything, he always came through. His sobriety was extremely important to him. After getting sober and attending many AA meetings he realized he had discovered a second family. He thought the world of all the people at AA. He always tried to help anyone who was trying to get sober. He would tell anyone that needed to hear it that sobriety and the people at AA helped save his life. (So if you ever need help to quit drinking or using, he would want you to know the people at AA are just waiting to help!) Scott adored his family and friends and spent most of his time around them. He loved his kids and enjoyed building new relationships with them after he reached sobriety. Recently, he began a new role as the extremely proud "Poppa" of his baby granddaughter, Freya Layne. To say that he was crazy about the baby would be an understatement.

“ I met Scott in recovery 14 years ago and he became a sponsee brother to me after asking my sponsor of 5 years at the time to sponsor him and we became instant friends.

Scott, myself, Randy Box, Joe Holt, Brad Balentine, and Matthew Moffat got the opportunity to be pallbearers for our late sponsor Joe Gamble in 2016.

Between Scott, myself and other sponsee brothers, we would carry on our late sponsor's legacy by quoting him at every meeting we attended, sharing the knowledge and experience our sponsor passed on to us that has touched many we have come into contact along our sober journey.

Scott had the personality that he never knew a stranger, and always brought a smile when we would sit and have long conversations until late hours after a meeting.

Him, myself, and others would go out to eat numerous times over the years after meetings, and he always brought true friendship, and laughter to all of our conversations.

This has been a hard one to handle so far because there hasn't been as many friends come along like Scott that left a lasting impression, that we will carry with us until it's our time to meet again in that big meeting in the sky.

All of our friends who knew him have suffered a big loss. R.I.P. brother. See you, Joe Gamble, Glenn Enlow, Joe Holt, and the others who have all passed we spent hours, days, months, and years with spreading hope to those we tried to carry the message of recovery to.

We will truly miss you as we continue to go along our journey.

“ I remember many early mornings we would head out with his dad’s truck and the aluminum boat and go after that wall hanger. We never did catch the big one but we always had fun trying. He was a true friend and I will miss him.
